Topic 1: What's your top strategy for staying up-to-date with #meded literature? #mededchat

Anthony R Artino Jr @mededdoc 8 hours ago

T1 I have a Google Scholar alert setup so that anytime someone cites my work, I'm notified. It's THE BEST WAY I've found to stay in "the scholarly conversation" in my #MedEd area. #MedEdChat

A.J. Kleinheksel @AJKleinhex 8 hours ago

T1 Feedly is by far by my most useful tool for staying up-to-date on literature for all the disciplines I work in. Although I still really miss Google Reader. #MedEdChat

Gary Beck Dallaghan @GLBDallaghan 8 hours ago

@mededdoc T1 #mededchat That's a great idea. I didn't realize GoogleScholar did that.

Lauren Maggio @LaurenMaggio 8 hours ago

@MedEdChat T1 I set up table of contents alerts for 6 jrnls w/ 2 in #meded; 2 general ed and 2 informatics. I like the mix of topics, methodologies & voices #mededchat

Mark Ryan @RichmondDoc 8 hours ago

Mark--family doc in Richmond, VA; teaching med students. T1 I don't yet have a good way to keep up in the moment. Most of my updates come from meetings/etc. esp via @STFM_FM #mededchat

Gary Beck Dallaghan @GLBDallaghan 8 hours ago

T1 For me I find getting the table of contents emailed helps me stay up on what is of interest or of need #mededchat

A.J. Kleinheksel @AJKleinhex 8 hours ago

T1 I also set Google Scholar citation alerts for my own work, set alerts for a few keywords, and I follow several people on either Google Scholar or ResearchGate. #MedEdChat

Mark Ryan @RichmondDoc 8 hours ago

T1 Over the years I've learned I am not the best at finding recent literature and reading it on my own. A collaborative, in-person approach seems to work better for me... #mededchat

@andrewolsonmd @MedEdChat I've got to check that out. Will need to ask the #medlib how to set it up, but sounds incredible! #mededchat

@LaurenMaggio Not for me, at least. It's a weakness of mine: give me a journal article to read out of general interest, and I probably won't. But: share ideas w/ me in real time, in person? I'm engaged. #MedEdChat
