Gary Beck Dallaghan @GLBDallaghan8 hours ago

@BJBRoman @MedEdChat @MvdRidder T1 Don't you think a good way to destigmatize anything is to talk openly about it to normalize it? Unfortunately mental health is still talked about as though it was taboo #mededchat

@Alliance4ClinEd @apgonews @Surg_Education T1. I used to do sessions in the OB/GYN clerkship on psychiatric disorders during pregnancy and post-partum period. #MedEdChat

Alyssa Shaffner @AlyssaShaffner8 hours ago

@ArjaSateesh @MedEdChat Unfortunately, that is due to the fear of consequences and the stigma associated with it. Not necessarily from lack of insight. #MedEdChat

Dr. Porter-Stransky @NeuroVixen8 hours ago

@BJBRoman @MedEdChat @MvdRidder Stigma is a real problem; there is an artificial distinction between physical illness & psychiatric illness. While many of the biological mechanisms of psychiatric illness remain unclear, discussing psych symptoms like order medical symptoms may help destigmatize #mededchat

Monica van de Ridder @MvdRidder8 hours ago

@BJBRoman @MedEdChat I think it is so important that our learners understand the (negative) power of stigmatizing. Especially towards the patients and family. I think our learners (and society) need to understand the difference between diagnosing and stigmatizing. #mededchat

Brenda Roman, MD @BJBRoman8 hours ago

@GLBDallaghan @MedEdChat @MvdRidder T1. Very powerful when physicians share their struggles, but much fear about repercussions-which could be the reality more often than not. #mededchat

Sateesh Arja, M.B.B.S., MHPE, MSPH @ArjaSateesh8 hours ago

@MedEdChat #mededchat T2 Every physician should understand the impact of psychiatric illness at personal level, family level, and community level. This is just my opinion. I am not sure how psychiatrists think. #meded

Brenda Roman, MD @BJBRoman8 hours ago

@GLBDallaghan @MedEdChat Great question--for centuries, many of the disorders were not treatable, until lithium, the early antipsychotics, and antidepressants. #MedEdChat

@DSchatteMD @dschattemd8 hours ago

@ArjaSateesh @MedEdChat T2: Agreed! In our clerkship the students complete a patient-caregiver interview and ask how the illness has affected the family and community, and vice versa (along with the best and worst parts of care). I think that is opening. #MedEdChat

Gary Beck Dallaghan @GLBDallaghan8 hours ago

@BJBRoman @MedEdChat @MvdRidder Do you think with some of the newer legal protections for employees this may lessen the fear of repercussions? (I personally don't....but had to ask the question) #mededchat

Monica van de Ridder @MvdRidder8 hours ago

@MedEdChat I am not a psychiatrist. I think that it does not help when our physicians sometimes can't explain complaints, don't understand the origin of symptoms, and say to the pt: 'It is psychological, because it can't be anything else.' I think that can do so much damage. #mededchat

Brenda Roman, MD @BJBRoman8 hours ago

@GLBDallaghan T2. Unfortunately, the way reimbursement works, clinics often just want to pay psychiatrists for "writing prescriptions" and leave the therapy, etc to other mental health providers. Not necessarily bad, but perpetuates the myth. #MedEdChat
